

Autumn Semester 2008

Practical Case-solving in European Law - Eiropas tiesības. Kāzusi (angļu valodā) -

Prof. Dr. Thomas Schmitz
DAAD Lecturer

- Course description:

(course code JurZ5066)

The course provides a deepening of your knowledge of European law and an advanced education in practical case-solving. It focuses on those elements and structures of the law of the European Union, which are fundamental for the understanding of the Union and for the work as a lawyer in its member states. It deals in particular with the basic concepts and the implementation and enforcement of European Union law, with the competences and institutions of the Union, the protection of fundamental rights in Union law and the economic fundamental freedoms of the Union's citizens.

The law of the European Union will not be presented in the conventional abstract way, but packed in practical cases, which show the relevance for the practical work of a lawyer. We will solve the cases and elaborate complex solutions together. Thereby the course participants will get a thorough instruction and advanced training in the methods and techniques of legal case-solving, in particular in the writing of legal opinions. They will learn and train how to approach an individual case, how to work out precisely the exact question to answer, how to structure correctly the solution of a case in the field of European law and how to formulate it accurately. They shall also gain the ability to solve entangled cases with complicated facts and intricate complex legal problems in a rational, well-structured, comprehensible and reconstructable way. Eventually, they will be so familiar with the strict inherent rules of legal case-solving, that they will easily discover the weak points and flawed arguments in the presentation of cases by their colleagues, being able to take advantage of them, for example in legal disputes and Court proceedings.
